"And Aharon did" (8,3)
Rashi comments: " This is to tell the praise of Aharon that he did not change.

The Sfas Emes explained that usually when a person starts something new, he feels very enthusiastic about what he is doing. He is excited about the good he is doing and feels very motivated. But after some time passes the enthusiasm and excitement get lost. This was the praise of Aharon. Every time he lit the lamp in the Tabernacle he did so with the same enthusiasm as on the first day.

There are many projects that people start with much enthusiasm. There is a special excitement in starting something new. But after doing the same thing over and over, people get bored and often give up in the middle. In order to accomplish anything, one needs to master the ability of sustaining enthusiasm. The more enthusiastic one is the more motivated one will be to continue. Always focus on the value of what you are doing and view it as if this were the first time.

For this week take something that you used to be excited about and try to reawaken the enthusiasm in that task.

Have a beautiful Shabbos!
